Newry board approves referendum vote on withdrawal process

By ALISON ALOISIO

Newry selectmen voted unanimously Tuesday to hold a referendum ballot vote in June on whether to stop the current school withdrawal process.

But if the SAD 44 School Board does not hold to its pledge to start a separate process to potentially change the local school funding formula to be more favorable to Newry, the selectboard has the option to not sign the warrant for the referendum, they said.

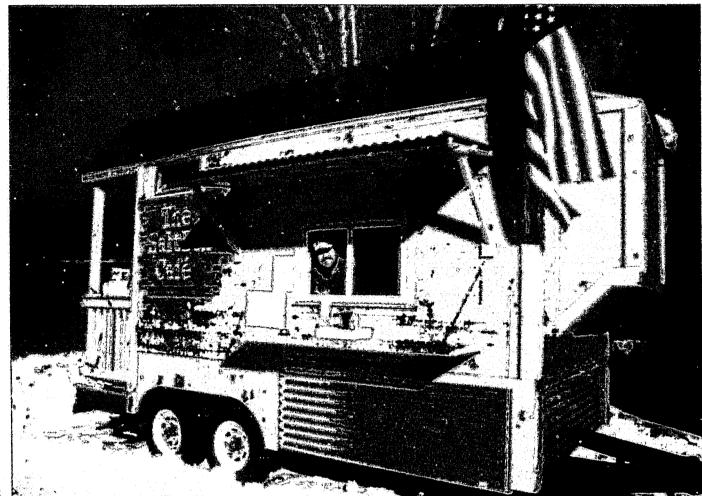

The warrant must be signed at least 45 days before the vote, which they set for primary day in June (the 14th).

Last week the School Board voted to "initiate the statutory cost sharing formula amendment process, once the Newry selectmen initiate a warrant article to allow the Newry voters to consider if they wish to terminate the withdrawal process."

The idea to look at the formula option was prompted by the failure so far of an effort by the Newry Withdrawal Committee to negotiate a withdrawal agreement for town residents to vote on. SAD 44 negotiators have stood firm on their financial position, which would keep Newry essentially paying to the district the same as it is now because, the negotiators said, it is the fairest solution for all.

Newry panel talks binding arbitration, state law change

By ALISON ALOISIO

Newry Withdrawal Committee Educational consultant Mark Eastman, who said he has not seen this sort of stalemate (see related story above) in his experience as a withdrawal consultant, said at Monday's NWC meeting he had recently spoken with former state Education Commissioner Jim Rier about the situation.

Eastman said he considers Rier "the most knowledgeable person about withdrawal who has ever served in the department."

Eastman said Rier told him the Newry stalemate was not the first of its kind in Maine, but the others were only resolved through a town threatening to go to court over it. Rier said that in other situations, according to Eastman, "once you got to that point of near litigation, people got together and had agreements completed."

"Story Time" inspires readers across generations

By AMY WIGHT C HAPMAN

Ask anyone who grew up in Bethel what they remember about visiting the public library, and Story Time comes quickly to

For at least 60 years, children have been coming to the Bethel Library on a regular basis to listen to stories and take out books to read, or have read to them, at home.

"The role of Story Time is to inspire lifelong reading habits and a love of books and literature," said Nancy Brown, president of the Bethel Library Association board of trustees.

"We want children to love books and coming to the library. Our programs introduce young children to books, rhymes, music, and other fun activities."

Many former patrons of memories recently on the Facebook page "I Grew Up in Bethel, Maine" and by email.

"The first time I ever tied my shoes by myself was during story time, sometime in 1988," wrote Paige Brown, who lived near the library on Broad Street and was a frequent visitor. Roger Dock remembered weekly visits to the library with his fourth grade class from Crescent Park School in 1958. He described walking two abreast—the "buddy system"-as the students were shepherded down Mason Street by their teacher.

School Board: Playground, trip, retreat, personnel changes, more

Story Time shared their BYAMY WIGHT CHAPMAN

In addition to the business items reported in last week's Bethel Citizen, the following articles were part of the business conducted at the Jan. 25 SAD 44 School Board meeting.

Playground update The deteriorating playground structures at Crescent Park School were removed during the Christmas vacation. Acting on the recommendation of the Facilities Committee, the School Board voted unanimously to add a separate article to the district public budget meeting, asking voters to approve the transfer of funds from undesignated fund balances to the Capital Improvement Reserve Fund, and the expenditure of those funds toward replacing playground structures at CPS and Woodstock Elementary School.

The amount of the transfer is yet to be determined, but the Facilities Committee has recommended an amount not to exceed $150,000. Murphy said the actual amount may be less. The expenditure is expected to fund base structures, with groups from both schools intending to fundraise to add more elements to the playgrounds.

Supt.'s report Superintendent David Murphy told the School

ceive the estimate of state aid to the district and the expected local share of costs from the Maine Dept. of Education by mid-February.

Murphy said he met with former Maine Commissioner of Education Duke Albanese to discuss a School Board retreat, and that board members will be surveyed within the next week about scheduling a time and what topics they would like to see covered at the retreat.

THANKS TO GOOD SAMARITANS To the Editor:

Last Wednesday, Jan.27, I experienced one of those lifechanging events that make one realize how very fortunate one is.

I was completing my regular six mile run along Route 2 at around 6 a.m. and was crossing the intersection at Bear River Rd. when I was "nicked" by an eighteenwheeler turning onto Bear River Rd. from Route 2.

I was so lucky that only my right forefoot was run over, but I was still in distress and without phone or identification. Out of the darkness a wonderful Good Samaritan came running to help me up, call 911, and allow me to sit in her car while I waited for the ambulance. This kind woman completely rearranged her day to help me. We exchanged names, but in my state of shock I forgot it.

I was fully expecting a lecture for running in the dark (which unfortunately my work schedule makes necessary), but instead got only kindness and concern. Other drivers who witnessed the accident also stopped to make sure I was okay.

Thank you all so much. I am truly blessed to live in such a wonderful community with such phenomenal

ECONOMICS DETERMINE... To the Editor:

My Jan. 14, 2016 defense in the Bethel Citizen of the protections provided by our Comprehensive Plan - and by extension our system of ordinances and Self Rule, closed with: "The consequences of no protection are what ruin the future prospects of our communities; and we must pause and ask ourselves why anyone would even think of eliminating the excellent work already done to protect our future." I'll elucidate today by pointing out that our beloved town of Bethel, Flint Mich., the Challenger disaster, Massey Energy and TPP have a lot in common; all are either subject to, perpetrators of, or victims of the terrible consequences of corporate overreach.

It's not overstating to say that our little town is every bit as exposed as any entity of any size on Earth, if we forsake our protections and their timely evolution to meet future needs. Whether it's the "corporatization" of Flint, Mich. governance, the "business decision" to launch Challenger, the deaths caused by wanton avoidance of coal mine safety rules, or the secret global trade agreements that threaten the sovereignty of nations and citizens alike - all are glaring examples of allowing "economics to determine" outcomes as has been suggested right here in Bethel.

We are empowered by our Constitution to conduct the affairs of governance as "an informed electorate." If we fail to remain alert, informed, and engaged, we will have forsaken not only our own future, but the future of generations to come.

Most of us have heard the phrase "it takes a village to raise a child," and we've probably heard it too many times. Well, a similar thought can be said on the other end of the age spectrum.

As an aging citizen, I recently dealt with a month-long illness. Were it not for the caring, support, and help of people in and near my community, life would have been much more difficult. It was friends and neighbors who kept my home, hearth, and animals well cared for while I was receiving the care I needed at MMC.

I wish I could thank everyone who helped personally but I'd forget someone. There are a couple folks who have done so much that I have to mention them. My neighbors, Norman and Peter, helped in ways that went far beyond anything I could have imagined. Erin, who owns Tucker's Doghouse Boarding & Daycare, took in my dog Monk and cared for him the better part of a

It appears that it takes a community to pitch in and help an ailing aging person. Thank you everyone. I am now recovering and hope to be back hiking and skiing before the winter is over.

UPCOMING EVENTS IN BETHEL

To the Editor:

What a crazy winter it has been, but we have our best months to get out and play in the snow ahead of us! We hope you have been getting out to enjoy the various events being offered each weekend at our winter venues and businesses! For a complete list, check out www.bethelmaine.com

We are in the process of finalizing the February Vacation Week Scavenger Hunt! Keep an eye out in next week's edition of the Bethel Citizen for details! This will be a great family friendly activity!

People have been asking about upcoming future events - since this time last year we were preparing for hosting the Annual Moose Lottery and Festival. The Commissioner of the Maine Dept, of Inland Fisheries & Wildlife has been moving this festival around to various regions and communities the past few years. This year's Moose Lottery is being held in Kittery at Kittery Trading Post, We do hope to get the festival and lottery back to Bethel in the future!

The Chamber has been asked by the Mahoosuc Arts Council to help keep the Bethel Art Fair going. With a very small board and no paid staff, their ability to handle the administrative and organizational tasks has been challenged. The good news is that the Chamber staff has the capacity to help! A new website is being created: www. bethelartfair.com where all vendor applications, the schedule, and other important information will be available. The goal is to do whatever we can to grow this event into a wonderful kick-off to the summer season, celebrate the arts and creative spirit that abounds in and around the Bethel area, and also help the Mahoosuc Arts Council with their mission to support the advancement of the arts and humanities in the adult communities and schools systems of the Greater Bethel Area.

Finally, the MollyOckett Day Planning Task Force met last week and chose this year's theme - "Celebrating Community." A couple changes we also made are that the parade will be moved back to 11 a.m. and that we do not plan to close Main Street this year. Instead, we encourage all Main Street and Village businesses who are interested in having events and sidewalk sales to let us know what their plans are, and we will add them to the schedule for the day. We will be updating the event website, www.mollyockettday.com in the coming weeks where vendor applications will be available.

The Chamber board members and staff welcome your ideas! If you have a suggestion that has the potential to add value to our events, and you have the energy and initiative to help, please let us know!

ART GATHERING THANKS

On behalf of the First Universalist Church (Unitarian Universalist) of Norway and AmeriCorps VISTA at Healthy Oxford Hills, we are happy to report that our first annual Lunch and Art Gathering honoring Martin Luther King, Jr. was a great success. We had a full house on Martin Luther King Jr. Day to enjoy the free lunch, the live music, and the art projects. We thank all who attended and all who helped make the Martin Luther King, Jr. celebration take place.

The four beautiful paintings created by the community that gathered will be donated to local retirement homes.

We offer our enthusiastic appreciation and thanks to Singepole Mountain Band and to the Younger Bloods for performing wonderful music. We thank all of the church members and Food Corps members who helped prepare and serve the delicious meal and we are grateful for the contributions of all who shared their thoughts to honor Martin Luther King, Jr.

We also thank Taylor Owens and Sarah Carter for providing an information table with materials explaining their work in public health. Sarah is a Community Nutrition Educator with Maine SNAP-ED and Taylor works for substance abuse prevention.

From the Bethel Town Manager's Office

By Christine M. Landes

As always, it is my pleasure to provide this bi-weekly column for the citizens of Bethel.

On Monday, January 25th the Bethel Board of Selectmen held a Public Hearing in regards to the proposed sewer rate structure. After the public had a chance to comment, the board decided not to implement the fee system as presented. They have asked the current fees committee members to join up with some new volunteers to have an alternate proposal by the April 11th meeting.

Those properties that had the additional dwelling unit fee suspended last year, should now be aware that the suspension came off December 31st. This means for the first billing quarter of 2016, you will be receiving bills for those units once again. (Mailed in April.)

The budget process has started for FY17. Each department head has been given their current budget sheets to predict what their department needs are for the upcoming year. Once all the forms have been submitted, I will review the requests and if needed, speak with each department about the numbers. I always try to substantiate the request to make sure the Budget Committee is fully aware of why the dollar amount requested is what it is.

The Route 2 Bridge resurfacing project is moving forward. From my understanding, a construction company has been chosen for the contract. When this project commences, (date not yet available) I would caution all of you using that bridge to expect delays. One side at a time will be resurfaced using an alternating light to let traffic flow at two minute intervals. This will mean some possible congestion and safety issues near the Parkway intersection. I will update as more information becomes available.

The Ordinance Review Committee is back at looking at ordinances again. They have met with our CEO, Jeff Warden, to obtain a better understanding of what changes, omissions, and additions to current code would be beneficial to our town. I encourage each of you, especially business owners, to contact Jeff to ask questions about what is allowed in code. He is more than willing to provide some suggestions and recommendations to make sure the code is followed.

I am still awaiting a definite time to have a guest speaker attend an informational meeting regarding Strategic v. Comprehensive Plans. As soon as I have a confirmed date, I will place it on the website and if time allows, publish it in this article.

Please remember if there is anything I, or the employees of the town, can do for you please do not hesitate to contact us. We are here for you.

Rofe, who had also tired of the tough local job market, had recently started his own contracting business, NQR Creative Designs and Home Solutions.

"This was his first tiny house project," Glatz said. "He was pretty excited."
Recycled, reclaimed,

Working together, he and Rofe designed a fully equipped commercial kitchen on wheels. With the help of several other friends, and access to construction space in a warehouse belonging to Glatz's former boss, they were able to build it from the ground up in just seven

Glatz searched for good deals on commercial cooking equipment and was able to locate almost everything he needed secondhand, including a refrigeration unit from the technical school at Oxford Hills.

"I found the gas stove on Craigslist," he said, indicating the gleaming commercial range with two large burners and generous griddle space.

"It was a great deal, but it took me 22 hours of work to get it cleaned up."

The ventilated stove hood came from a Chinese restaurant in Portland. It was the wrong size for the space, but Glatz was able to modify it with a metal grinder, then had a cap welded on to make it the right height.

The cost, including welding and the installation of a fire-suppression system, was $700. If he had had to purchase the same equipment new, he said, it would have set him back about $6,000.

Quality and value
The decision to bring The SaltBox Cafe to the Sunday River Road for its inaugural season came about when Glatz recognized that it would be difficult to compete with sitdown restaurants in Portland in the wintertime.

"I decided to bring it up here to Bethel, because people who live up here, and people on their way to ski, are already ready for the cold," he said.

With a focus on quality and value, Glatz has deliberately kept his prices lower than those on the mountain.

He offers several gourmet breakfast sandwiches and burritos, all under $8.00 and all prepared to order.

His "Brown Bag Ski Lunch" features a hearty sandwich—turkey and cheddar, ham and Swiss, a BLT, or a loaded veggie and hummus vegetarian option—on a choice of bread, accompanied by a granola bar, chips, and a bottled water, all packed into a brown paper lunch bag, for $10.00,

When ski season ends, he plans to relocate The Salt-Box Cafe to Portland. The food truck is fully self-contained, with an RV pump and water tanks, a generator, and the gas range, so he can move it wherever he decides to go.

Story Time

He wrote that he had to be on his best behavior when visiting the library, because one of the librarians, Elsie Davis, was his great-aunt, and a cousin, Ginny Keniston, who later served as head librarian, was often there, too.

"If I was rowdy or out of line, my mother knew instantly. First I would hear it from my aunt, then my teacher, and then my parents," Dock wrote, adding, however, that because he loved his soft-spoken aunt dearly, "I curbed my usual behavior."

"The best part of going was to get out of class, but I managed to learn something in spite of myself," he said,

Frances Thurston-Doucette remembered attending Story Time herself in the 1950s and '60s, and bringing her daughter there in the 1980s.

She also recalled taking out five books on the first day she had her new library card.

"I would have taken more, but Mrs. Davis said five was the limit," she wrote. "I was so disappointed, until she smiled and told me to come back when I could tell her the stories in the five books. I was back in three days."

A social center
Over the years, Story
Time and other children's programs made the library a social hub for the younger set, as well as their parents.

"I remember that Story Hour was the first and best way to meet other kids and mothers when we came to town," commented Nancy Jones Hanson, who lived in Bethel with her family in the 1980s and 1990s.

Current librarian Michelle Conroy has held the position for more than 20 years.

"When I first started, we had so many kids we had to divide them into two groups" for Story Time, she said.

Lisa Fox recalled leading Story Time at the library as a volunteer.

"What fun!" she wrote.
"And what a great way for young stay-at-home moms (and dads) to meet each other and visit while their little ones are listening to stories and doing crafts."

In addition to Story Time, the library has hosted children's events such as American Girl Tea Parties and Teddy Bear Picnics, and runs a yearly summer reading program to encourage children to keep reading during their school vacation.

"Marvin Ouwinga and I had a brief spell of showing Friday night movies at the library for grade school kids," wrote Cathy Newell, who has served as a member of the Bethel Library Association board since the mid-1970s.

Now living in Kennebunk, Paige Brown recalled how she and her older sister, Phoebe, used to spend hours paging through old newspapers in the library's upstairs room, looking for their birth announcements.

"I liked to look up the old fires and obits and stuff," added Phoebe. "Yes, we went there a lot!"

Longtime library volunteer Edna York, who passed away in 2014 at the age of 104, was remembered by many as a continuous presence at the library well into her 90s, and, especially, as the institution's voice on the phone when a book was overdue.

Recalling the stacks of discarded books and an old record player that were stored upstairs, Phoebe remembered, "Edna only had to tell us to quiet down a few times."

Tradition continues
In an August 2015 Facebook post, Ed Sloan wrote that he had great memories of visiting the library for Story Time and added, "I hope they still do that in this age of the Internet and Kindle books."

Yes, Conroy assured him, the Bethel Library continues to hold Story Time at 10 a.m. on the first and third Thursdays of the month, and welcomes all preschool children to attend.

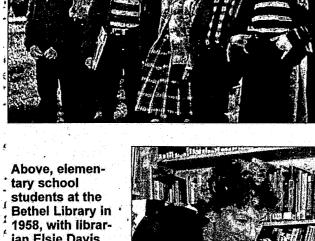

A parent or caregiver must accompany the child, and the library is always looking for volunteers who would like to read or sing with the children during Story Time.

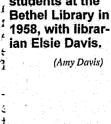

With advances in technology, books may not always be the main reason many 21st-century patrons visit the library, but Story Time continues to be an important way to introduce young children to the love of reading.

"The Bethel Library is pretty high-tech these days," wrote Newell on Facebook, with "public access computers, online catalog, access to e-books through Maine State Library."

But, she added, "it is still a friendly place with a good selection of books to check out!"

Story Time is held at 10 a.m. on the first and third Thursdays of the month. To volunteer or for more information, call Michelle Conroy at the library, 824-2580.

Two longtime Telstar cafeteria staff members, Jennie Fillmore and Peggy Tripp, will retire at the end of the school year.

"They've both been with us for a long time, and we certainly appreciate the time and energy that they've put into the district," Murphy said. "They are both well-connected to our kids, so it will be a loss not just for the district, but also for the students." Murphy announced the

Maine Schools for Excellence

The School Board heard a presentation from Scott he has tried to attend as Harrison and Jane Blais, the project director and professional development coordinator for the Maine Schools for Excellence program. MSFE oversees the five-year TIF (Teacher Incentive Fund) grant awarded to the district to enhance educator effectiveness and student learning.

The TIF grant process uses peer mentoring and a detailed evaluation process during which educators set goals and learning targets and learn to analyze and interpret student data.

"The goal is to make sure that every teacher has what they need to grow professionally," said Blais, adding that the single most important factor affecting student learning is the quality of the instruction they receive from their teachers.

As a result of their participation in the program, more than a dozen SAD 44 teachers are pursuing National Board Certification, a three- to five-year process which Blais likened to attaining a master's degree, and several others are considering it.

"There are only 293 National Board Certified teachers in the entire state, and we have had a total of two in this district as long as I have been here," Murphy said.

"To think that we have that many people now who are lined up and willing to take on that challenge is really quite impressive."

Committee reports Bethel Director Tim Carter, chair of the Facilities Committee, reported that his committee had met to discuss the elementary school playgrounds and to review the bus fleet, which he said is currently adequate for the district's needs. The committee discussed the feasibility of converting the bus fleet to LP gas from diesel, but determined that the environmental benefit would be minimal and the cost of the conversion and higher fuel expense would be prohibitive,

Finance Committee Chair Bonnie Largess of Newry said her committee had received initial information they need to initiate the FY '17 budget process, and will be meeting almost weekly throughout March and April to complete it.

The Negotiations Committee met to begin reviewing contracts that are due to be renewed in the upcoming year.

Sheryl Morgan of Woodstock, chair of the Personnel/Policy Committee, reported that her committee had met to review the new policy on medical marijuana and the out of state field trip policy. They also met with a representative of Educational Networks to review options for a new district website.

Board member comments

Director Norman Milliard of Greenwood said many committee meetings as possible since joining the board last July. He said he had arrived for a recent Finance Committee meeting and found it had been rescheduled, but the full board had not been notified.

Finance Committee Chair Bonnie Largess apologized for the inconvenience and said that a medical emergency had necessitated the rescheduling.

Bethel director Tim Carter said he thought a board retreat needed to take place as soon as possible to give each member of the School Board a chance to express their frustrations and what they believe are their duties as board members "so we can work out some of our differences."

Carter said it was not necessary to schedule a retreat with an outside facilitator or at an outside loca-

"We just need to sit down as board members and frankly discuss what we'd like to accomplish, and we can discuss goals and objectives of what we'd like to see established, and things like that," he said. "We don't need somebody from the outside that we're going to spend money one, and that's my opin-

Statement from the chair

Board Chair Lainey Cross asked the board members to remember that they are a team. "Our goal is to provide positive educational experiences for the students of SAD 44," she said.

"It is not our job to micromanage our administration. It is not our responsibility to operate schools, but to see that they are operated well."

"The superintendent is the educational leader of our district. Our actions are limited to policy-making, leaving the administration of the schools to the superintendent."

"It is our responsibility to come prepared to board meetings, listen with an open mind, respect the role of the board chair and other members, to support the decisions made by the board, even though your viewpoint may differ,"

Board votes reported in last week's Bethel Citizen, the board voted to authorize Murphy to execute a purchase and sale agreement for land adjoining the Telstar property, and also voted to create a committee to study the cost-sharing formula used by district towns, provided that Newry residents are given an opportunity to vote on terminating the withdrawal process, Other board votes included the unanimous approval of an overnight field trip for a THS student to attend the All-State Music Festival at the University of Maine in Orono, May 19-21 and an out of state field trip for interested THS juniors and seniors to White Community Mountain College on January 26. The board then approved in the field trip policy that ing. would give the superintendent the authority to approve out of state trips without the prior authorization of the School Board. Murphy said schedule changes sometimes prompt the need for out of state trips, especially by sports teams, without enough notice to seek the board's approval.

The board approved a first reading of a new medical marijuana policy. Murphy said the policy had been reviewed by school nurse Chris Cole. He also told the board that there are no current situations under which the policy would be used.

The Policy Committee recommended, and the School Board approved, an agreement with Educational Networks for developing a new district web-

Murphy said the administration had been exploring ways to better connect with students, parents, and alumni through social media and the district

As a result of those discussions, a Facebook page was created that now reaches several hundred people and regularly features updates on events and programs at the schools, as well as alumni profiles.

Responding to feedback that the SAD 44 website is difficult to use, Murphy said the administration began to look into a complete redesign of the web-

After reviewing several designs, the Policy Committee recommended a website design by Educational Networks that is attractive to viewers, offers a user-friendly interface, and can be customized with different levels of access and linked pages for each school.

Andover woman leads roofing project

By MATTHEW DAIGLE Sun Media

An Andover woman said last week she intends to start a fundraiser to help needy local homeowners whose roofs need repair. Melanie Nordwall, a single mother of two children, said she came up with the idea of the Raise a Roof project last year. but she was in the middle of doing a fundraiser for another family in need.

"I figured that I could start the roof project in January," she said.

Nordwall said that while there are groups that pro-vide funding assistance to people to repair their homes, a lot of the organizations examine income, while some elderly peo-ple and veterans are "just above the required line for assistance,3

"Income isn't the only factor to take into account," Nordwall said. "I decided I wanted to try and come up with a fundraiser that would help people in the River Valley area who need a little extra help."
Nordwall said she would like to raise $20,000 for the project. "In order to hit that goal, I want to hold a lot of events over the summer that people can attend and donate to," Nordwall said.

The Apostolic Church of Rumford offered to help with fundraising and manpower, she said.

Criteria for assistance single-family includes homes owned by the occupants with a roof having more than 50 percent damage or disrepair; and a letter identifying the name, address and contact information of a potential person or family, along with an explanation of why help is needed.

"After we receive the letters, we'll select five or six of them randomly," Nordwall said.

Letters will be accepted in April, May and June, with the work beginning during the summer or fall. Residents can send their letters to P.O. Box 315, Andover, ME 04216.

"After we figure out the people who will have their roofs repaired, we still have to visit each home to see the roof and make sure it qualifies," Nordwall said. "If we end up raising enough money to fix a few houses, we'll fix them as soon as we have the money, rather than wait until the fall."

Nordwall said she created a Facebook page called "Raise a Roof (RVA)" that people can join for updates about fundraisers or to offer their services. She also created a website called myevent.com/RaiseaRoof where people can donate money.

Nordwall said the first fundraiser is selling Rada cutlery. "For the entire month of February, people can help by either collecting Rada cutlery orders or purchasing something," Nordwall said. "I'm hoping that we can raise enough money next month to help cover advertising costs or printing off fliers to post around the River

talked with Newry Town Administrator Amy Bernard about options,

Bernard, who attended Monday's meeting, said that "neither side is finding room to negotiate. You need that room in order to make negotiations work."

She said a recommendation to go to binding arbitration was another option to try to get an agreement for Newry residents to consider. "If that doesn't come to be, then let it be known now that our alternative is to seek litigation and go to the court system. because you don't really have any other options,"

Others on the panel were skeptical SAD 44 would go to arbitration.

"It would surprise me if the district agreed to it," said Attorney Dan Stockford, the NWC legal counsel, but he said there a first reading of a change "would be no harm in ask-

Committee member Wil-

Stockford said that unlike mediation (tried unsuccessfully by the NWC and SAD 44), which utilizes a facilitator to try to come to an agreement but does not require one, binding arbitration requires the parties to agree to abide by the decision of an arbiter on what the withdrawal agreement would

He said that while he believes the district negotiators would have the authority to enter arbitration, he would not expect them to be willing to turn the determination of the contents of a withdrawal agreement over to a third party.

NWC Chair Jim Sysko said after the committee's executive session that the group has not taken the arbitration option off the ta-

"Our recent experience with Newry and its interactions with SAD 44 have exposed a flaw in the withdrawal statute that needst o be addressed by the department at the next legislative session...

"I am concerned that since there is nothing in the law that requires parties to negotiate in good faith that this approach will be adopted by other districts who wish to gridlock the process. This strategy is not only costly (over $100,000 to date) but it disenfranchises the voters of the town seeking withdrawal. Unless the department develops a remedy all future withdrawals may be in jeopardy."

Tuesday's vote by the Newry selectmen came after about an hour of debate between people who favored the move and those who had reservations about trusting the School Board.

The night before, the Newry Withdrawal Committee had voted unanimously to support a town vote to "pause" the withdrawal process, not stop it, according to NWC Chairman Jim Sysko.

"Change 'terminate' to 'pause' and I'll be happy," he told selectmen at their meeting. Sysko argued that a vote by Newry to stop the withdrawal process would deprive the town of any leverage it had in convincing voters in the other district towns to change the funding formula.

But Selectman Jim Lar-

gess said a referendum on terminating the process would finally give Newry residents what he said many want - an opportunity to vote.

"The withdrawal committee doesn't want to stop it - why would you? You're absolutely right and I get your logic. But what's the town think? ... Although it's not withdrawal, at least it gives us a chance to vote," he said.

Resident Doug Webster said he didn't like the idea.

"We seem to be caving in as a town to the school," he said, noting that the withdrawal and funding formula processes can go on at the same time.

Replied Largess, "You are absolutely right, but let's let the town make that decision. All we have to do is ask." If the town votes to continue the withdrawal effort, he said, the funding formula process could still happen, since the School Board did not make it contingent on a vote to terminate withdrawal. But Selectman Gary Wight, who is also an NWC member, said the town has nothing in writing "saying that the School Board will do what they say."

Largess said it seemed clear at the School Board meeting that they were committed to the arrangement.

Webster said a better move would be for the selectmen to "back the Newry Withdrawal Committee 100 percent and say, 'we are going to go for withdrawal.' I think they would start the funding formula next week."

Largess, however, said he had not seen a withdrawal proposal that would make education better for students in the region.

Replied resident Gary Drown, "But you're not representing the region. You're representing Newry." Sysko said the other towns in SAD 44 are not paying even the equivalent of the state average per pupil tuition for their students, and if they would do that the "extra money from Newry [in the form of a proposed Targeted Grant Fund that is part of the NWC withdrawal proposal]' would make a fantastic school system." Petitions

Administrator Amy Bernard said if Newry voted to end the withdrawal process and the funding formula process did not work out, Newry would have the option of starting the withdrawal process over again by circulating another petition. "It's 24 signatures and a 45-day notice," she said, but noted she is neither for nor against it.

The possibility of Newry residents circulating a different petition as an alternative means to start the funding formula change process was also discussed.

Although the state law requires signatures by a number of voters in SAD 44 that is 10 percent of the total who voted in the last gubernatorial election, Bernard noted all of those needed signatures could potentially be gathered in

"Maybe that's the way to go, is not do anything on this [on voting to hold a referendum] and get a petition started and let it.

happen that way," Wight said.

The selectmen eventually came to the agreement to schedule the vote in June, allowing more time for the funding formula process to get underway and for Newry to see how it progresses.

'This is the selectboard starting the vote [for a referendum]; the selectboard can end the vote," said Largess.

After the vote Sysko commented, "We're buying some time. That's the way I look at it."

Resident Brooks Morton, a withdrawal supporter, said, "I feel better about this. It shows we're not going to just lay down and accept any conditions they throw out. We at least made a stand."

Warm winter makes ice conditions questionable

By Ron Fournier Orion Outfitters and Guide Service

In contrast to 2015, this year's ice fishing season was off to a slow start, with many area lakes and ponds freezing late, or in some cases, not at all. Anxious anglers had to be much more careful in choosing a location to start fishing in early January as warmer than normal temperatures and rainfall reduced the amount of ice expected. Smaller ponds of course froze earlier than the larger lakes, but tributaries and rain made weak spots and dangerous conditions in many areas. As we round the corner into February, most of the smaller lakes are now holding 8-12" of ice, yet caution should still be taken on unfamiliar waterbodies, especially in the southern part of the state or near moving

Locally, the Bethel area has enjoyed good conditions and above average fishing for over 3 weeks now. Many people have traveled to the region from the southern part of the state because the conditions have been more reliable. The milder weather has been welcoming for folks taking children out to enjoy the sport. During the past weekend, sunny skies and temps in the high 30's made for a great time to get outdoors in hopes of catching the big one! When planning on a day on the ice, make sure that you check ice conditions before you venture out, as conditions can and do change over the course of a few days. Sunscreen, sunglasses, and layers are the key to staying warm and protected from the increased sun exposure. Also, knowing the regulations for each waterbody is important to make sure you are fishing legally, as some lakes have restrictions on species and bag limits,

For fishing with children, we usually target bass and pickerel for the most action and catch rates, while for the distinguished fishing folks, we seek trout and Landlocked Salmon.

For local information, stop by Bethel Bait, Tackle and More, or visit www.eregulations.com/maine/fishing/me-Maine.pdf. Ski Tour the White Mountains Association

in the 1980s The no-snow winter of 1979-80, severely hurt ski areas without snowmaking. Ski areas like Evergreen Valley and two of the smaller ones in Jackson, N.H. were forced to close. Ski touring a.k.a. cross country skiing was given sort of a seasonal double whammy, At the Sunday River Inn Steve Wight took his crew to Grafton Notch and found some snow for his cross country ski customers to use. Conditions across the whole White Mountains area were affected,

For the next season of 1980/81 six cross country ski areas formed a coop program they named Ski Tour the White Mountains. This group consisted of The Jackson Ski Touring Foundation, Thom Perkins, director; Waterville. Valley, Chuck Moeser, ski touring director; Sunday River Ski Tour-ing Center, Steve Wight, owner and director; Bretton Woods (Mt. Washington Hotel), Bill Brown, director; Bethel Inn, Dick Hoisington, director; and Balsams/Wilderness, Tom Nangle, director,

News about the new association ran this way for the opening of the 1980/81

"White Mountains Ready for Cross Country Skiers" Jackson, N.H. "Cross country ski centers in White Mountains are ready to provide this year's skiers the best in outdoor winter recreation found in the eastern United States," says Thom Perkins, President of the Ski Tour the White Mountains Association. The association is a non-profit group of six major cross country ski centers located in New Hampshire and Maine. It is devoted to advancing the attractiveness of ski touring in terms of excellence in trails, facilities. accommodations, instruction and variety of experience as well as in promoting the health benefits derived from this form of exercise. The association's headquarters is located in Jackson, N.H., co-located with the Jackson Ski Touring Foundation.

According to Perkins, one of the outstanding values this association offers is a ski around ticket for midweek skiers, "Actually," says Perkins, "skiers can get six ski areas for the price of one by taking advantage of the association's 5 day, midweek ski around ticket. A skier or family group can purchase a 5 day trail ticket from anyone of the six centers - Balsams/Wilderness, Bretton Woods, Bethel Inn, Jackson, Sunday River or Waterville Valley and ski at anyone of the other five areas weekdays for no extra charge while the ticket is valid."

Other advantages offered by the association are (1) assurance of high quality operations and trail maintenance by its members, and (2) a centralized source of ski touring information in the area of New England's most bountiful snowfall.

Ski Tour the White Mountains information about events and locations was sent to Maine. New Hampshire and Massachusetts newspapers as news release letters.

Kathy, our daughter Apryl and I worked on the news releases that were mailed to a large newspaper audience. Getting into this project meant that I had a good excuse to visit all the areas in the ciation and meet the men in charge of the ski touring centers. Otherwise I would probably not ever have visited the Mount Washington Hotel where the 1944 Bretton Woods monetary conference was held. That hotel is beyond impressive.

HON. HENRY H. HASTINGS

Bethel

My ther, Edwin Brown, was one of the first people in the Bethel area to own an airplane. Dad was part of a local group of flying enthusiasts that included Carmen Onofrio, Sid Dyke, and Leslie and Dick Davis. He learned many of his flying skills in the late 1930s from John West, a Berlin, N.H., pilot. I never thought of Dad as a risk taker. In fact, quite the opposite. This weekend I learned another side of him from John Winslow. .

John told me that my father was known for landing his plane in tight spots. In the late 1940s John was picking potatoes for Ernest Buck in the field at the foot of Hudson Hill. Chadbourne Tree Farms now grows pine trees in that field. The potatoes were already harvested, John said. "David Buck and I were standing in the field near the barn and Edwin Brown landed his plane in the potato field. He turned the plane around and taxied over to where we were standing and talked to us." After a few minutes, John said, Ed got back in the plane, and taxied down the field. "David and I just knew 🜬 was going to crash into the fence at the end of the field," John said. "But at the last minute the plane appeared to hop into the air and he flew off toward Locke's Mills."

John also told me about the time my dad "lost his engine" over the Albany Town House and made an emergency landing in a nearby field. My mother corroborated John's stories. "He always wanted to see how small a space he could land in," she said,

My flights with Dad were tamer. Except for the time he took me up over Rumford and the latch on the passenger door of the old two-seater came undone. Dad casually reached across and pulled the door shut. "Don't worry," he said, "The seat belt will hold you in." We continued our flight.

DiCocoa's in Bethel is listed in Downeast Magazine's February 2016 issue as having one of "vacationland's 30 most mouthwatering breakfast dishes." Their outstanding dish is almond granola. "Owner Cathi DiCocoa and her crew obsess over unadulterated ingredients - they even make the vanilla extract used in their granola," Downeast wrote. They continued: "A honey-sweetened mixture of baked oats; toasted sliced almonds and sunflower, pumpkin, sesame, and flax seeds, DiCocoa's granola has just the right ratio of crispy cluster to nutty crumble. Served with yogurt (house-made, of course)." Well done, DiCocoa's.

My mother and I ate lunch at Kowloon Village on Sunday afternoon. As we ate, we watched cars (and trucks) turning from the Parkway onto Route 26. Most of them did not stop at the stop sign; a few did rolling stops; but only a handful came to the complete stop that is required at a "Stop" sign. This is one of Bethel's busiest intersections. I think we were both astounded at the total disregard for the "rules of the road." I have two thoughts: Be extremely careful if you're driving this section of Route 26, and sheriff's deputies, please take note. February is American Heart Month. Saturday, Feb. 6, is National Wear Red Day, which helps draw attention to the issue of heart disease in women. Heart disease and stroke kill 1 in 3 women, but it's 80 percent preventable. February is a time for us to educate ourselves about heart disease and make some healthy changes.

East Bethel By WALLY RITZ

word, the day of me writing this, Feb. 1, and it has been another balmy day for this season. I do not recall having experienced this warm and lack of snow kind of winter since I moved to Maine in 1986. I do feel bad for all the men and the town crew who earn extra money in the Winter months, but aside from that, I do not mind this weather. Seeing how this is so unusual, I would like to hear predictions from you all for the month of February or memories of this kind of winter. Call me at 507-1008 or e-mail heinrichcracker@gmail.com,

For all who know Marcia and Laurence, they made it to England safe and sound. They are staying at a B&B till they find their new permanent home there. I would bet the breakfast there is nowhere near as good as Laurence can make it...wonder if they can keep him ate something similar on out of the kitchen?

Have a great week.

West Bethel

How did a 16 year old girl farm the Flat Road in West Bethel end up in Italy drinking vino Italiano and eating true Neapolitan pizza? My freshman year at Gould Academy I found myself in Latin classes with Dr. Wooley and 20 other kids. It took a few weeks of pure terror for me to finally tell my mother that I had no idea what Latin was. Amo, amas, amat, amamos, amatis, amant. Femina, feminae, feminae, feminam, femina. Together the class spoke like untrained singers learning a Gregorian

By my junior year I found myself at Telstar in Latin III. Senor Felix Otero-Otero taught the Latin class with vim and vigor often singing in operatic voices to showcase his enthusiasm for the subject matter. Our year would include typical Latin prose and poetry translating Caesar, Cicero, and Horace to name a few. It was the section on the Roman Forum with its monuments and crumbling buildings which Senor Otero became consumed with the idea that we should visit the Forum not just look at it in a book.

The year was 1970, Feb. 13 when 17 classmates and I arrived in Milan at 2 p.m. and met our Italian guide, Dominique. This tall handsome man spoke English with a thick Italian accent which would be music in my ears for the next two weeks. We boarded a private motor coach and were whisked to the Hotel Dei Cavalieri. After quickly unloading our luggage into our 'rooms, we were off sight-seeing. We stopped at the most famous cathedral in Milan, the Duomo di Milano. As soon as we departed the bus we were bombarded by young boys wielding plastic baseball bats. After being hit a few times, we all ran back to the bus with battered and torn clothing. It was Carnival time in Italy and we got caught in the frenzy and excitement.

Judy Angevine and I put together and stayed roommates for the entire trip. We had many wonderful experiences during our two weeks on our "Treasures of Italy" tour. I'll tell you more another time.

Milliard emailed to let me know that Peter Musso Greenwood is the Artist of the Month for February at the Local Hub. He has been painting for many years and since his retirement he has found extra time to pursue his passion for art. Peter will have framed as well as unframed pieces for sale. Stop by to view his works, and enjoy some of the Hub's delicious food, Here's an idea for an outdoor winter activity that combines art and exercise. Betsey Foster shared a Facebook post about the stunning "snow art" created by British artist Simon Beck and suggested it would be fun to try to creone of our local ponds.

Beck straps on snowshoes and walks for miles to create geometric designs on unbroken expanses of snow. Trained as an engineer, and an expert in orienteering, he uses a set of sketches and a compass to plan his designs and determine how many steps are needed for each part of the drawing. A large design can cover three or more acres and require nearly 20 miles of snowshoeing. If we get a fresh snowfall and a day without much wind, it would be fun to try a much smaller and less impressive version of Beck's snow art on North, Round, or South Pond, or in a field somewhere, before they get crisscrossed with snowmobile trails. I don't know a thing about orienteering or how to use a directional compass, but I wonder if it would be possible to at least create some circles by using a string tied to a stick as a drawing compass. I actually haven't even set foot on any of the ponds yet this year. The fact that I was out in a kayak on Christmas Day has made me wary about the safety of the ice, although I've seen a few people out ice-fishing on North Pond recently. I guess we've' had enough cold weather to make the ice thick enough to be out on, but certainly nothing like last year, when some fishermen found that their standard ice augers weren't long enough to drill all the way through to the water below. Last winter I had a large flock of redpolls at my birdfeeders every day for a few weeks, beginning on January 15, but this year haven't had any. I just read that they only come this far south when food is scarce in their preferred habitat, which is mostly in Canada. The same is true of pine siskins, another visitor from last year that I haven't seen this winter. I haven't had nearly as many woodpeckers and nuthatches as last year, either, and I wonder if that means that with the warmer temperatures this winter, they are still able to find bugs and grubs under the bark of trees.

The most frequent visitors to our feeders have been goldfinches, purple finches, chickadees, and juncos, along with a few American tree sparrows, Daylight report: The days are more than an hour longer now than they were six weeks ago! Most of the increase so far has been in the afternoon, but by the end of February, we will have gained almost an hour in the morning, which should make waking up easier, at least until we set the clocks forward on March 13 and sunrise goes back to 6:58, about where it is right now.

And here's something to look forward to, if you're a fan of early mornings, as I am: during June, the sun rises at 5:00 or earlier every morning except June 30, when it rises at 5:01.

Andover

While our pocket books are enjoying the warm weather, we all realize this is not good for those of our friends who depend on show for metr whiter dustness here in this corner of the State of Maine. Lack of snowmobilers, ice fishermen and cross country enthusiasts impacts our small businesses in towns like Andover. So called "open winters" happen every few years, as I discovered reading highlights from past years in the "Citizen" last week.

The Budget Committee finished up their work last Wednesday evening by lopping off $4,000 from the Town Office Budget. Having attended all of the committee meetings, I can say that all of the departments were very aware of our over-all budget problems due to our new obligations regarding our elementary school. The proposed budget is about as bare-boned as it can be. I will endeavor to report a total budget figure next week with some of the breakdown.

The Selectmen, after some discussion with Secretary, Hope Peterson, looked at the cost of producing the annual Town Report booklet and have decided to remove some reports and post them to the Town website. The booklet will still include department reports from the Fire Department, Library, Highway, Transfer Station but reports from the Olde Home Day Committee, Service Circle, Snow Valley Sno-Goers, East Andover Community Club and Ellis River Riders, Andover Alumni Association will not be in the printed report. This idea came about by looking through previous annual report booklets. These reports were added in recent years. This has been done in the interest of economy and will still provide essential information to the public in preparation for annual Town Meeting.

On a personal note, thanks to my friends, you know who you are, who have come to my aide once again while I contend with Vertigo. Those of you who have had it know how debilitating it is and has left me unable to drive which is not a good thing in this neck of the woods. I'm pretty much confined to quarters, but am hoping this will pass soon. It is not fun!

Newry By DOUG WEBSTER

The Newry withdrawal Committee had a meeting on Monday the first. Chair

Jim Sysko said the committee was hoping to get a proposal from the school board last Friday. Instead they received a four page letter, once again explaining how the school board is not willing to negotiate. Instead of a proposal, the School Board Committee sent a four page letter, explaining how they were good negotiators, and have done plenty of negotiating in the past. Just so everybody is clear, here is the Merriam/Webster definition of negotiating: 'the act or process of having a discussion in order to reach an agreement." Maybe the school board has done it in the past, but they definitely, by definition, are not doing it now. The reason the school board committee keeps giving for not moving ahead is that it would be fiscally irresponsible because the remainder of the district will not pay the extra money if Newry withdraws from the district. The leadership for the school must be speaking for themselves, because there is no way they can possibly know that for a fact. I have no doubt that school board will stop using this false narrative and stop trying to scare the public.

Educational consultant Mark Eastman wrote a letter to the Commissioner of Education back in November. He was asking the Commissioner about SAD 44's negotiating in good faith. He got a response from former commissioner Jim Ryer. He said it was not the first time that towns had to threaten litigation to keep the process moving forward. That seems to be the only way to keep the school administration from stonewalling. Everyone stay tuned for the next episode of this ongoing saga.

tickets to Mazatlan, Mexico. I initially tried to purchase the tickets from Cheapo Air for roundtrip for two seniors from Portland to Mazatlan.

The website kept finding round-about trips with two or more changes of aircraft and interim stops at such exotic places as Detroit, Mich. or Los Angeles. Calif., and long wait times between flights. The prices were high, too, averaging around $1,000 per person.

Then I decided to try connections from Logan Airport, Boston, Mass. On Jan. 8 I finally found a flight from Boston to Mazatlan on AeroMexico with only one interim stop - Mexico City, with a short layover and a 1.5 hour flight from there to Mazatlan. But the price was still high. Then we checked with Katrina to see if she wanted to go with us, and she found roundtrip tickets through Orbitz on the same airline for less than $600 per person, but Kate said she had to work. I then contacted Orbitz and ordered the AeroMexico tickets at the cheaper price. Next day when we received our itinerary online, I discovered that either I or someone else made a typographical error and spelled my first name with the letter "K" inserted between the "R" and the "I" in Richard. Since that spelling would obviously not match my passport spelling, I reconnected with Orbitz online. The procedures for correcting spelling errors were so confusing I went on the Orbitz chat line to converse directly with someone via the comput-

The Orbitz person was friendly and tried to help, but he found that Aero-Mexico will not allow name changes on their airline tickets. Then my contact asked me to hold while he checked with his supervisor. After a wait of several minutes, my chat room contact came back online and said his supervisor would contact Aero-Mexico and would send an e-mail confirmation of my name spelling change within 48 hours. After two days I still received no e-mails from Orbitz. I repeated the above procedure with similar results. No e-mail confirma-

Then Mona took my notes and began trying to make phone contact with Orbitz, and finally, after a couple hours of frustration, she found a phone number to contact AeroMexico directly by phone. A nice lady with a heavy Mexican accent finally understood our problem, checked it out, and told us berbally that my name spelling error had been corrected on our confirmation the date of my first chat line contact. She would send us an e-mail within 48 hours confirming this. We still have not received e-mail confirmation, but today, Jan. 25, Mona again got on the phone, and after several calls finally found a number for AeroMexico where a live person confirmed my name was spelled correctly and this time we did receive and e-mail confirmation of all our flight connections and my name spelled correctly! Prime Time Ski Club news

Ski conditions at Sunday River ski area continue to be good at least early to mid-morning and sometimes throughout the day thanks to the mountain's top-notch snowmakers and groomers who help out Mother Nature when she refuses to cooperate with the ski industry like this year. Of course, even in the best conditions, accidents can happen and skiers should be prepared if an accident happens to them. When one of our Prime Time Ski Club members fell while skiing about a month ago and fractured her hip in several places, many lessons were learned on what everyone needs to do to be prepared for an on-snow emergency.

Number one is to carry identification while skiing, a brief medical history and who to contact in case of emergency. Last year there was a Prime Time Ski Club column that described in great detail several ways of identifying yourself so this column will just list the products, web addresses and phone numbers. Products include Medic Alert® bracelets and neck medallions (www.medicalert. org/800-432-5378), ECOS® Emergency ID tags that can be worn on clothing or attached to your helmet (www.ecoseid.com) and Road ID® bracelets, originally developed for runners and bikers (www.roadid,com/800-345-6336).

The least expensive and low-tech way to identify yourself is to carry a handmade card that lists your name, address, phone number, an emergency contact, medical conditions, list of medications, food or medication allergies and health insurance and primary care physician contact information. Put this information card in a see-through zip-lock sandwich bag in your ski jacket pocket. If you carry a cellphone, it's a good idea to list an emergency contact in your phone's contact list under "ICE" (In Case of Emergency), an acronym that most first responders are trained to look for. If you have an iPhone, there is an app called "Health" where you can list emergency information that can be accessed even if you need a passcode to open your phone.

However, there are also other considerations when an accident happens and the skier is transported to a hospital for further diagnosis and treatment. Those who drive to Sunday River from off-mountain locations oftentimes gather in the Mahoosuc Room at South Ridge Base Lodge to "boot up" before the lifts open. It's a good idea to identify your boot bag with a luggage tag and maybe a note in your bag describing your car along with license number so it can be found in the parking lot if someone needs to drive your vehicle to the medical facility. It's also a good idea to always ski with someone, like Prime Time Ski Club members, so there is someone to help you out in case of an injury. Anyone looking for someone to ski with should meet at North Peak Lodge at 10 a.m. weekdays (upper level, right hand side past the bar). After a brief time for announcements, members usually break into small groups, based on skiing ability as well as speed and terrain preference. Or you can meet up with Prime Timers in the Mahoosuc Room at South Ridge prior to the lifts opening. Maybe the club motto should be changed from "no one ever needs to ski alone" to "no one should ever ski alone." Join us, be safe, have

Jay (0-7) got 17 from Nick St. Germain and 16 from Brandon Demillo. With Bethel (3-3) off with a bye, the last game was a blowout as Tommy Guns was just too fast and very accurate from long range, hitting 19 threes, and running away with a 104-64 win over M and M Carpentry. Age-Friendly Community news

Were you listening? Maine Calling is an interactive radio program on MPBN, Monday through Thursday at noon and anytime online. On Jan. 25, the topic was Age-Friendly Communities in Maine. Of the 29 US states that have Age-Friendly Communities, Maine, along with two other states, is second only to New York in the number of communities (six) that are part of the network. FMI go to http://www.aarp.org/livable-communities/networkage-friendly-communities/info-2014/member-list.html.

The Bethel community is proud not only to be one of those six communities, but also to have paved the way for consideration of a community-wide approach to this movement. In fact, Newry, Greenwood, and Woodstock are actively pursuing a formal partnership with Bethel in the Age-Friendly Community Network. We are so

When the phones were opened on Thursday's broadcast, the Bethel Area program was the first caller, with Jackie Cressy giving an articulate report on our efforts. You may listen to the program by linking to http://news.mpbn.net/post/building-age-friendlycommunities#stream/0.

The program hosted three guests reporting on efforts in Maine. We have much to learn from these community programs. Patricia Oh from the Bowdoinham group (http://www.bowdoinham.com/aging-bowdoinhamcommittee) will make a visit to our Bethel team soon. Linda Weare from Portland told about the ITN program ("Dignified transportation for seniors" - visit http:// www.itnportland.org).

You may learn more about ITN - and many more transportation options - at the Age-Friendly Community public meeting on transportation: Wednesday, Feb. 24, 4 to 6 p.m. at the West Parish Congregational Church, FMI contact Nancy Davis (nancydavis.bethel@gmail.com, 381-1110).

Alan Day Garden seed orders start

The Alan Day Community Garden is kicking off its eighth year with an open Organic Bulk Seed Order, All seeds are high-quality and organic. They come from High Mowing Seeds, a Vermont-based company that began in 1996 as a backyard garden and today, is a thriving business that grows many of the varieties it sells on its 40-acre farm.

For most gardeners, Groundhog Day (or Candlemas) is the mid-point of winter and a fitting time to start thinking about garden plans, including starting the seedlings that take the most time to mature, such as onions, peppers, Brussels sprouts, and celery. Everyone is welcome to participate in this order, which offers a wide variety of open-pollinated, non-GMO seeds. Order forms are available at the Norway Memorial Library, Fare Share Market, Café Nomad, The Raven Collections, Green Machine Bike Shop, Paris Autobarn, Fiber & Vine, the Center for an Ecology-Based Economy (CEBE), and on the Garden's website at alandaygarden.wordpress.com. This service allows purchasers to buy smaller quantities at a discounted price of only $2 per pack, Orders must be placed by Feb. 11 and seeds will be available about two weeks later.

The Alan Day Community Garden serves elementary school children, offers a Youth Leadership program, offers a CSA to individuals and families, and offers garden plots to anyone who would like to garden. MLT "Into the Woods" Speaker Series: Hiking the Grid Forty-eight peaks in the White Mountains reach an elevation of 4,000 feet or more. Many hikers have climbed all 48. A considerably more ambitious goal is to hike them in each month of the year. Doing the math, that's 576 ascents, in deep-freeze to black-fly conditions. Garret Bonnema of Bethel is one of the few who have achieved this goal, known as Hiking the Grid. On Wednesday evening, Feb. 17, Garret will share his Grid adventures at the Shelburne Town Hall, beginning at 7 p.m.

This event is co-sponsored by the Mahoosuc Land Trust, as part of its "Into the Woods" speaker series, and the Shelburne Trails Club. The Shelburne Town Hall is located at 74 Village Road, approximately 16 miles from Bethel. Village Road parallels Route 2 on the north, and can be accessed directly from Route 2 or from Meadow Road, which is a lit intersection.

Light refreshments and a time for conversation will follow Garret's presentation.

The Mahoosuc Land Trust is an accredited community land trust encouraging public interest in conservation in central Oxford County and eastern Coos County, N.H., supporting a balance of growth and conservation and emphasizing sustainable and traditional land uses. For more information, visit www.mahoosuc.org or call 207-824-3806,

Waterford Library offers blind dates in February

Are you looking for the perfect date this Valentine's Day? Tired of looking for love in all the wrong places? The Waterford Library is hoping to pair patrons with the perfect match this February. Stop by the Library from Feb. 3 to Feb. 29 to participate in an exciting new program: Blind Date with a Book!

Blind Date with a Book is easy, fast and fun. Blind Date matches you with an unknown, gift-wrapped book that you check out at the Library without knowing the author or title. Check the singles ad on the wrapped books, (they will give a hint about the personality and genre of the book), make your choice, check out your blind date (be sure to avert your eyes during check out!) and take your date home. If you are unhappy with your date just return it to the library and try another.

After your date you get to share all the details with your fellow Library patrons on the Rate Your Date card. Did you have a love connection? Did the date end early? Did something unexpected happen?

For more information regarding Blind Date with a Book, please call the library at 583-2050, see our website or find us on Facebook, Library hours are Monday 2 to 6, Wednesday 3 to 8, and Friday and Saturday 10 to 2.
